justice marshall once remarked that if people knew what he knew about the death penalty they would reject it overwhelmingly foley elucidates marshall s claim that fundamental flaws exist in the implementation of the death penalty he guides us through the history of the supreme court s death penalty decisions revealing a constitutional quagmire the court must navigate to avoid violating the fundamental tenant of equal justice for all nearly 100 influential supreme court capital punishment related cases from 1878 2002 are examined beginning with Wilkerson v. Utah which questioned not the legitimacy of capital punishment but the methods of execution over time focus shifted from the constitutionality of certain methods to the fairness of who was being sentenced for capital crimes and why. The watershed 1972 ruling Furman v. Georgia reversed the court's stand on capital punishment holding that the arbitrary and capricious imposition of the death penalty is cruel and unusual punishment and therefore unconstitutional. Furman clarified that any new death penalty legislation must contain sentencing procedures that avoid the arbitrary infliction of a life-ending verdict which led to the current complex tangle of issues surrounding the death penalty and its constitutional viability.

The constitution is the fundamental governing document of the United States but to what extent do candidates and parties make constitutional arguments in the course of American elections by examining party platforms, candidate messages, presidential debates, and television ads? The constitution on the campaign trail answers four main questions: how often does constitutional rhetoric appear in campaigns, how much of it is explicit and how much implicit, what constitutional topics receive the most attention, and how often do the electoral competitors engage in an actual constitutional dialogue? The constitution on the campaign trail finds evidence for a long, broad decline in the use of constitutional rhetoric since the mid-19th century, making matters worse, the modern medium most responsible for conveying campaign messages on a day-to-day basis, television advertising, has proven least conducive to constitutional argument to that extent. Concerns about a deconstitutionalization of politics are well placed, however, and perhaps surprisingly, American campaigns have actually seen a limited resurgence in constitutional rhetoric over the past four decades, driven in large part by increased concern with judicial issues, rights, and federalism. The book concludes with explanations of past trends and a look to the future. The political analysis found in The Constitution on the Campaign Trail is firmly grounded in historical research and the conclusions reached are trenchant.

Dying is a social as well as physiological phenomenon; each society characterizes and consequently treats death and dying in its own individual ways, ways that differ markedly. These particular patterns of death and dying engender modal cultural responses, and such institutionalized behavior has familiar, economical, educational, religious, and political implications. The handbook of death and dying takes stock of the vast literature in the field of thanatology, arranging and synthesizing what has been an unwieldy body of knowledge into a concise yet comprehensive reference work. This two-volume handbook will provide direction and momentum to the study of death-related behavior for many years to come. Key features: more than 100 contributors representing authoritative expertise in a diverse array of disciplines: anthropology, family studies, history, law, medicine, mortuary science, philosophy, psychology, social work, sociology, theology. A distinguished editorial board of leading scholars and researchers in the field. More than 100 definitive essays covering almost every dimension of death-related behavior. Comprehensive and inclusive, exploring concepts and social patterns within the larger topical concern. Journal article length essays that address topics with appropriate detail. Multidisciplinary and cross-cultural coverage.

the information plus reference series provides statistical data on 32 of today's most controversial and most studied social issues each information plus title is a compilation of current and historical statistics with analysis on aspects of one contemporary social issue such as abortion capital punishment and genetic engineering each title is divided into chapters that are devoted to a particular topic the text provides a clear and comprehensive summary of up to date research on the topic and is interspersed with the statistical tables charts and graphs each table is directly referred to and carefully explained in the text
